

The Where's And How's Of Finding Love Online

With all the information coming from the multitude of websites claiming to be able to lead you to your true love, where is a person to turn? Millions of websites can be sifted through in the process of trying to find the one that will help you find your special someone. You need so much information in order to find your love, so here are what we consider to be some of the best websites for dating searches, complete with pricing specifics, membership numbers, and other helpful data.

Matchmaker.com has a monthly rate anywhere from about $8 to $20. There are eight million members and was recently named Best Online Dating Service by Forbes magazine. What makes Matchmaker so great? This website is very user friendly and they offer the most in-depth profiles on the internet. They start with a questionnaire which is then followed by an essay. They get the most information to ensure the best matches possible. They also have a feature that allows you to keep track how many times your profile has been viewed.

Coming in second place in terms of members, Yahoo Personals lists over 5 million. From $8 to $20 memberships like Matchmaker.com, Yahoo Personals include detailed profiles, and because of their search engines, you can focus on many choice factors, such as age, geographical location, and similar likes as well. Here you will find a multitude of other singles searching for love like you.

Still around the same price range, you can check out Dream Dates, from $9 to $25 monthly rates. Instead of messaging, this website with four million users, lets you talk with others. Of course, chat options for communicating, along with email, and IM are also available. Memberships for romance are standard, whereas Erotica is an additional option available.

For those not minding a slightly higher price range, around $16 to $25, 10 million users turn to American Singles. On this website you are provided with a list of those with profiles similar to your own, and you can arrange this prompt list of potential candidates by any number of different comparibles. For those you find yourself drawn towards, private connections are possible, while allowing you to remain unknown if you find yourself not attracted to others who may be attracted to you.

Match.com allows two ways of contact with other members only, but provides the most easiest usage. This is my personal favorite, and costs anywhere from $11 to $25 for monthly membership. You receive an instant match based on the information you type, and with over 15 million members, that says a lot about this website. When making a choice proves more difficult than you thought, a side-by-side comparison helps ease the selection process. Viewing candidates in this manner quickens the choosing.

Still can't decide? A website offering a 100 point scoring feature, Cupid's Review, can help you decide which dating site might best meet your particular needs. The options of targeted searches may be appealing to some love seekers, because you can zone in on geographics, backgrounds, lifestyles, or any other number of most important details related to your search. The simplicity of the site is most welcomed, and could bring you to other websites that you might not have even known existed.

So what websites are the best? I would say Match.com is my favorite, but there can be no wrong answer. Try more than one to get a good feel for what you want and what you like. Good luck!

About the Author

To get more info on eharmony and other great online dating services, be sure to check out this great site about love (TopTenDatingServices.com). You will be glad you did.

Source: <http://articlesonlove.com>